CROWN PROSECUTION SERVICE (CPS)

The Crown Prosecution Service is a new, independent service for England and Wales which handles the prosecution of criminal proceedings instituted by police forces (excluding certain types of minor road traffic offence). It was established in 1986 when it became a Government Department. The head of the CPS is the Director of Public Prosecutions. The Attorney General is the Minister responsible for the Service.

The Deputy Director and Chief Executive has the primary function of handling the day-to-day administration of the Crown Prosecution Service. There are four Regional Directors responsible for the 31 CPS areas. The Director of Headquarters Casework is responsible for cases handled by Headquarters Legal Divisions. The areas are each headed by a Chief Crown Prosecutor.
